COLOR

The Kroger logo's primary color is blue. On a blue background, it should be knocked out in white.

Only use the black-and-white version of the logo if the printed material (such as a newspaper) requires it.

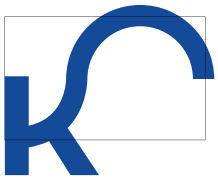

KROGER "K"

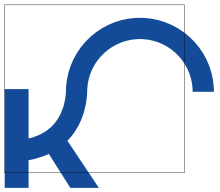

Our "K" is a key design element of our logo. Its iconographic value allows us to use it as a graphic element for specific communications and brand assets.

The examples on the far right show different ways to crop the "K" to create dynamic graphic compositions.

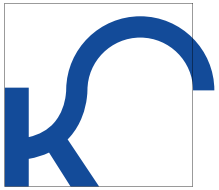

Use your best judgment when choosing a "K" cropping, and always create balance.

CAMPAIGN LINE LOCKUP
MAIN VERSION

These lockups are the primary way to compose the "Fresh for Everyone" tagline with a banner logo and should be used in all media that do not have visibility issues, including as an end card on TV commercials and videos, and on printed materials like circulars.

Full-Color Campaign Line Lockup:

When using the full-color logo, the tagline should be set in Kroger's primary blue to bring consistency to how it is treated across all banners, creating a connection to the brand and drawing attention to it.

For brand usage purposes, the use of this version should be limited to TV.

When using the family of banners, use your best judgment in placing them. When possible, keep them in alphabetical order, stack them no more than three lines tall and keep them justified.

FRESH CART

ICON

When Barney Kroger opened up his first grocery store in 1883, he had no idea his business would eventually revolutionize the way America shops and eats. By incorporating bakeries and meat markets into his grocery stores, Barney Kroger was a pioneer in recognizing the importance of providing his customers with fresh products in one convenient shopping experience. Over 135 years and 2,800 stores later, The Kroger Company continues to shape the industry it helped create while remaining dedicated to Barney Kroger's original commitment to providing his customers with quality fresh products.

The "Fresh Cart" icon is the embodiment of our brand's purpose and promise to feed the human spirit by making fresh food accessible to all. The Fresh Cart combines two core Kroger Co. equities, innovation and fresh, into one. The shopping cart is a symbol that has become synonymous with the grocery shopping experience. Our cart is a nod to innovation and was created using the curve of our K to represent our dedication to continually improving the shopping experience, no matter how you like to shop. The citrus wedge symbolizes a commitment to Fresh that goes beyond food. At Kroger, "Fresh" is an approach to everything we do and a feeling we hope to inspire in our customers.

Moving forward, this icon will complement our existing Kroger Co. Brand assets, including the logo and tagline, and it will serve as a consistent visual unifier across our banners, services, modalities and experiences.

LOCKUP

Sizing

To ensure legibility, we have set the minimum sizes for the reproduction of our lockup. Do not display our lockup smaller than the minimum size.

CLEAR SPACE & SPACING

To ensure the optimum legibility of the logo, we need to protect its perimeter. Clear space is equal to the height of the "K" curve, as shown. Do not place other logos, type or graphic elements within the clear space indicated in the diagram.

The icon should always be flush to the left of the Kroger logo and should not exceed the height of the "K". The space between the icon and the logo should be the width of the citrus wedge, as seen in the example.

The "Fresh Cart" icon should adopt the primary color of the banner it's locked up with, as seen in the example below.

LOCKUP & FFE

The following is the lockup of the "Fresh Cart" icon with the logo and "Fresh for Everyone" tagline.

LOCKUP & FFE ONLY

The following is the lockup of the "Fresh Cart" icon with the "Fresh for Everyone" tagline.

FRESH CART ONLY

The following is the lockup of the standalone "Fresh Cart" logo.

The standalone "Fresh Cart" may be used to identify the banner when the entire store logo is not an option.

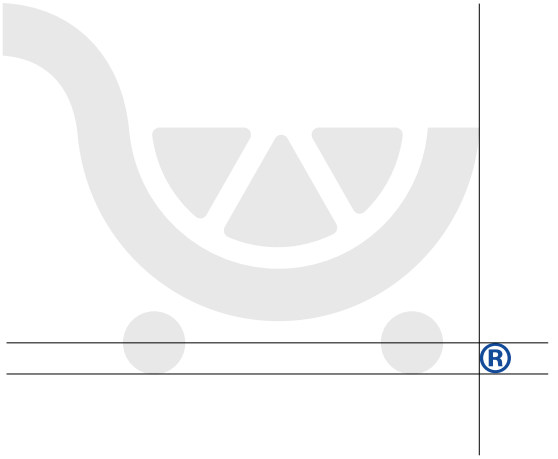

Register Mark

The registered symbol ® is half the height of the cart wheel and lined up with the outer right edge. The registered symbol should only be used when the "Fresh Cart" is used as a standalone icon.

The registered symbol should not be used where it becomes too difficult to read, such as on a Fuel Center sign, billboard or a lugged-on dimensional front-of-store sign.

Note: The "Fresh Cart" registered symbol isn't needed if the banner or "Fresh for Everyone" (TM) is present. Both already carry the registration or trademark.

Sizing

To ensure legibility, we have set the minimum sizes for the reproduction of our icon. Do not display our icon smaller than the minimum size.

CAMPAIGN LINE

OVERVIEW

Kroger's campaign line is
"Fresh for Everyone".

The campaign line comes in two versions:

- A single line set in ITC Avant Garde Gothic Std Bold
- A stacked version set in ITC Avant Garde Gothic Std Book.

Trademark Symbol

The trademark symbol (™) is placed at the bottom-right side of the letter E in"Everyone". Changing the placement of the symbol is not allowed under any circumstance.

Usage

The campaign line should be used for TV end cards, audio and POS since these have high visibility and impression rates and a high level of permanence.

However, the campaign line should only be used in digital display assets if space allows for legibility and if the line is relevant to the display content.

MODALITIES

KROFONT

The Krofont is derived from the Kroger logo by reappropriating the curves on other letters. Use of the Krofont is not as simple as using letters as shown in "the alphabet" on the following page.

Legibility and balanced swoops should always be considered. Any new type treatment using the Krofont should be designed with care and not overused while maintaining legibility.

If a new e-commerce service word needs to be developed, please contact the Brand Team for the request to be processed through DDB.

abcdefghijklmnop
qrstuvwxyz

WORDMARK

A set of visual type treatments using the Krofont has been created to tie together Kroger's modalities and in-store services.

Use knockout logos only on the Kroger core blue. There is no specific order to these modalities, but they should almost always appear in a row.

The current in-store logo does not have a hyphen included in the design, but when referencing in-store in copy, please ensure it is hyphenated

ICONS

A set of visual icons has been created to tie together Kroger's modalities.

Use knockout icons only on the Kroger core blue. There is no specific order to these modalities, but they should appear in a row.

For any specific vertical formatting needs, please contact the Brand Team with details so that it can be designed properly.

Delivery	Pickup	Ship	In-store

The modality should be used as a logo on packaging and/or store signage as a single-word headline, but never in a sentence structure.

The modality should not be locked up with the Kroger logo, and there should be sufficient space between the modality and logo if on the same surface or layout.

Incorrect Modality Usage Examples:

Do not lock up the modality with the Kroger logo.

Do not use modality logos in a sentence.

BRANDED CARDS

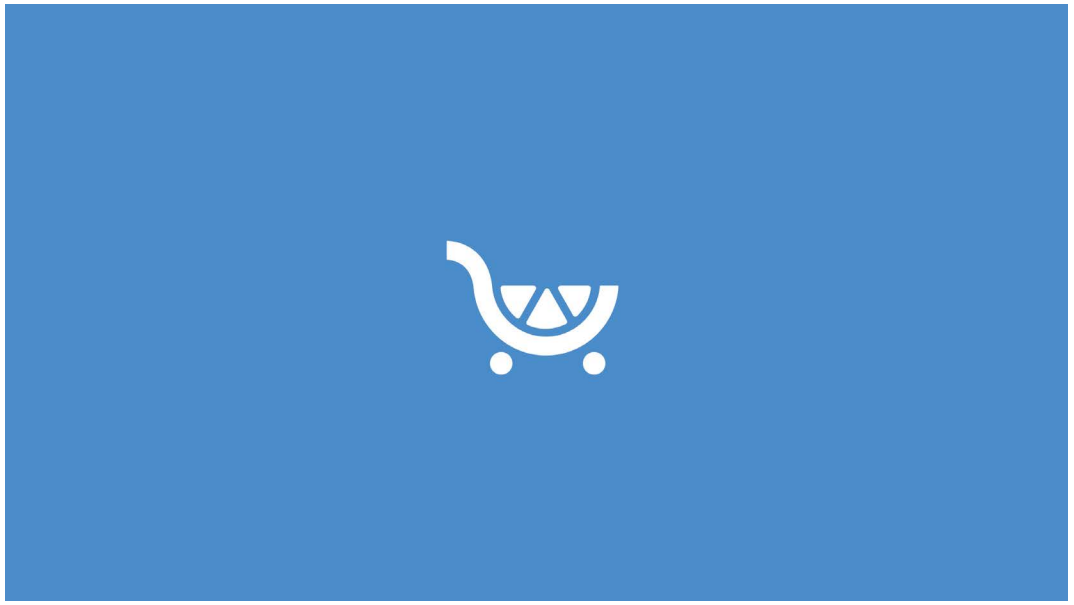

FRONT & END CARD OVERVIEW

Our card system consists of a front and end card, which helps our banners achieve maximum brand equity in the TV/video space.

Front and end cards should always be set in Kroger's secondary Sky Blue with knockout logos as seen in these examples.

These card treatments should be applied to all broadcast, digital and social videos.

Front

FRONT CARD PLACEMENT

Our front cards are meant to introduce branding within the first two seconds of our spots to increase brand awareness.

These cards are meant to be used for :60s, :30s and :15s (if time allows). We do not recommend using front cards for :06s since it would take up too much time.

Regardless of the store banner, the same front card should be used.

END CARD PLACEMENT

Our end cards are meant to close all of our spots, regardless of length. There is a long version to be used for our :60s and :30s, as well as a short version meant to be used for our :15s and :06s.

The end cards consist of our centered store banner + Fresh For Everyone tag, and and a maximum of one Kroji on the bottom right hand side of the card for simplicity of messaging.

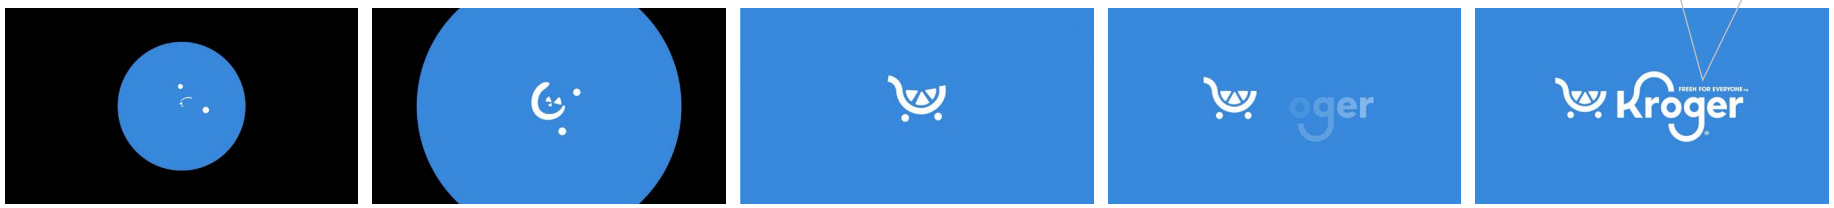

The motion of these elements is paired with our signature sound mnemonic — a brief, uplifting chime that syncs perfectly with the final visual lockup. Both the animation and sound mnemonic are integral to brand recognition and should not be altered.

AUDIO PAIRING SHORT FORM

Below are the order and placement of video and audio on the Short Form (15/06s) end cards.

Kroger (or affiliated) name is spoken in sync with the Fresh Cart animation.

Right after that, the sound mnemonic begins, with its first beats matching the rhythm of the orange slices on the Fresh Cart. Fresh For Everyone appears on screen at the same time as the Kroger logo.

Note: The files in the toolkit for the longform spots are 5 seconds long, since they include a frame hold at the end. The animated sonic logo itself is 4 seconds long, so when it's used in a spot, the end card should only be 3 seconds long.

AUDIO PAIRING LONG FORM

Below is the order and placements of video and audio on the Long Form (60/30s) end cards.

Kroger (or affiliated) name is spoken in sync with the Fresh Cart animation.

Right after that, the sound mnemonic begins, with its first beats matching the rhythm of the orange slices on the Fresh Cart.

The voice over hits on each word of Fresh For Everyone as they appear on screen.

Note: The files in the toolkit for the longform spots are 7 seconds long, since they include a frame hold at the end. The animated sonic logo itself is 4 seconds long, so when it's used in a spot, the end card should only be 4 seconds long.

CARD LENGTHS

Both our shorter- and longer-form end cards are shown below, with sonic logo included.

:15/06s (Short Form)

:60/30s (Long Form)

VERTICAL CARDS

Vertical front and end cards will behave the same way as their horizontal counterparts. All rules apply to these versions as well.

Specifically in the end cards, if a Kroji is included, it should be placed at the bottom center of the live area.

SONIC LOGO

SONIC LOGO GUIDELINES

Our sonic logo will also be used across all audio spots. The logo will mirror its placement in the TV spots, being incorporated into the VO signoff at the end of the spot.

To the right you can hear examples of the sonic logo in a :30 radio, :20 radio, and :30 podcast spot.

The sonic logo matches the pacing of our :30 TV spots (~4s), and should remain consistent across all audio asset lengths, since we don't have visuals to aid in recognition. All scripts should be written to account for this timing.

Similar to the TV spots, the music and sound effects are faded out ahead of the sonic logo starting. However, the fade is close to the start of the sonic logo, to help the spot feel seamless without the help of visuals.

Any radio disclaimers should come after the sonic logo is completed.

Note:

- The :20 base is for brand messaging and concludes with the sonic logo.
- The :10 weekly promo is for division-specific messaging and will not include the sonic logo.

COLOR

PRIMARY COLOR

Primary core blue has been the signature color of the brand throughout our history. It represents the knowledge, security, heritage and trust that our brand offers.

The Kroger core blue should be used as the first color of choice for copy and the Kroger corporate branding color.

TERTIARY COLORS

While Kroger's main colors are blue, six tertiary colors have been identified to bring diversity to Kroger's color palette.

These colors are to be used sparingly with the intent of simplifying the visual experience for customers by improving the shopping experience, representing specific in-store benefits along with different seasonal periods during key retail events.

Tertiary colors should also be used as background to highlight food photography on our iconic hanging signs.

Note for printers: When printing material using these colors, please make sure the color matches the Pantone reference.

TYPOGRAPHY

KROGER CAMPAIGN FONT

Our secondary typeface is called Gotham Rounded. This font is the perfect complement to ITC Avant Garde Gothic Std because it adds a human, fun and approachable look to the typographic compositions.

We utilize three different weights of the font for all brand communications: Bold, Medium and Book.

TYPE LEADING

The space between lines of copy, called leading, is an important consideration when setting type. For headlines, subheaders and descriptors, set the leading to 1.15 points for every 1 point of type used (e.g., 25 pt/28.75 pt). For body copy, set the leading to 1.5 for every point type used (e.g., 9 pt/13.5 pt). For legal, set the leading to 1.3 for every point type used (e.g., 6 pt/ 7.8 pt).

GOTHAM ROUNDED USAGE

Here are the main rules for correct usage of Gotham Rounded, including weights and type styles, on Kroger's communication materials.

This font should be used primarily for all communication materials that require a friendly tone, and preferably together with our illustrations. Examples include print ads, in-store posters or outdoor billboards.

Exclusively use this font when a communication material is showcasing a Kroji or any other element from our animated world.

The preferred use of this font is for headlines (Gotham Rounded Bold). Nevertheless, the Medium and Book versions can be used for subheads and body copy, respectively.

Use uppercase for headlines on communication materials depicting Krojis.

Use sentence case for those materials that require longer headlines and, even though they do not depict a Kroji, have a lighter and more informal tone.

Avoid using this font whenever we need to communicate a rational, informative or serious message such as pricing, product descriptors, corporate communications or signage. As an exception, we can use it for legal copy exclusively on communications depicting our Kroji world.

To create visually rich and interesting compositions, the use of Gotham Rounded in combination with ITC Avant Garde Gothic Std is allowed primarily on editorial and digital materials, unless we are depicting any element of our Kroji world within that specific layout.

When used in a Kroji environment, a headline written in this font can combine two different colors, with one always being white.

KROGER BRAND FONT

Our primary typeface is called ITC Avant Garde Gothic Std, and it should be used for all our brand communications. This simple, clean, easy-to-read font lets us communicate clearly with our customers.

We utilize three different weights of the font for all brand communications.

The space between lines of copy, called leading, is an important consideration when setting type. For headlines, subheaders and descriptors, set the leading to 1.15 points for every 1 point of type used (e.g., 25 pt/28.75 pt). For body copy, set the leading to 1.5 for every point type used (e.g., 9 pt/13.5 pt). For legal, set the leading to 1.3 for every point type used (e.g., 6 pt/ 7.8 pt).

ITC AVANT GARDE GOTHIC STD USAGE

Here are the main rules for correct usage of ITC Avant Garde Gothic Std, including weights and type styles, on Kroger's communication materials.

This font should be used primarily for materials that require a more formal, informative, serious or rational tone. Examples include pricing, product descriptors, corporate communications, magazine articles, circulars or signage.

To create visually rich and interesting compositions, ITC Avant Garde Gothic Std and Gotham Rounded can be combined on editorial or digital materials (if there are no Krojis present).

Avoid use of uppercase letters, except to highlight a specific word such as SAVE.

Bold font is used primarily for headlines and prices.

Medium and Book versions of the font should be used for subheads and body copy, respectively, such as for product descriptors.

Use of the oblique version is reserved to highlight an item's style or model name, such as for circular or POS.

FONT COMBINATIONS

Pairs of fonts allow us to create a wide range of materials that not only keep a cohesive look, but also give us the range to create a visually rich ecosystem. In the end, this prevents our typographic compositions from becoming static or stale.

ICONOGRAPHY

KROGER'S ICONS

Kroger's icons are used to improve way-finding and functionality while navigating content. Icons are literal depictions and are intended to bring clarity to their subject. Therefore, they should always be simple, easy to understand, and consistent with the rest of the set and other user-interface elements.

Anatomy

Kroger icons are outlined and rounded. Outlined icons provide a light, clean, unified style that works well in dense UIs.

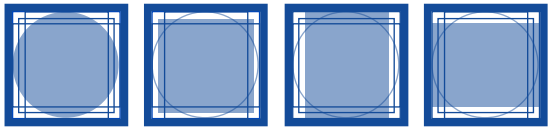

Sizing

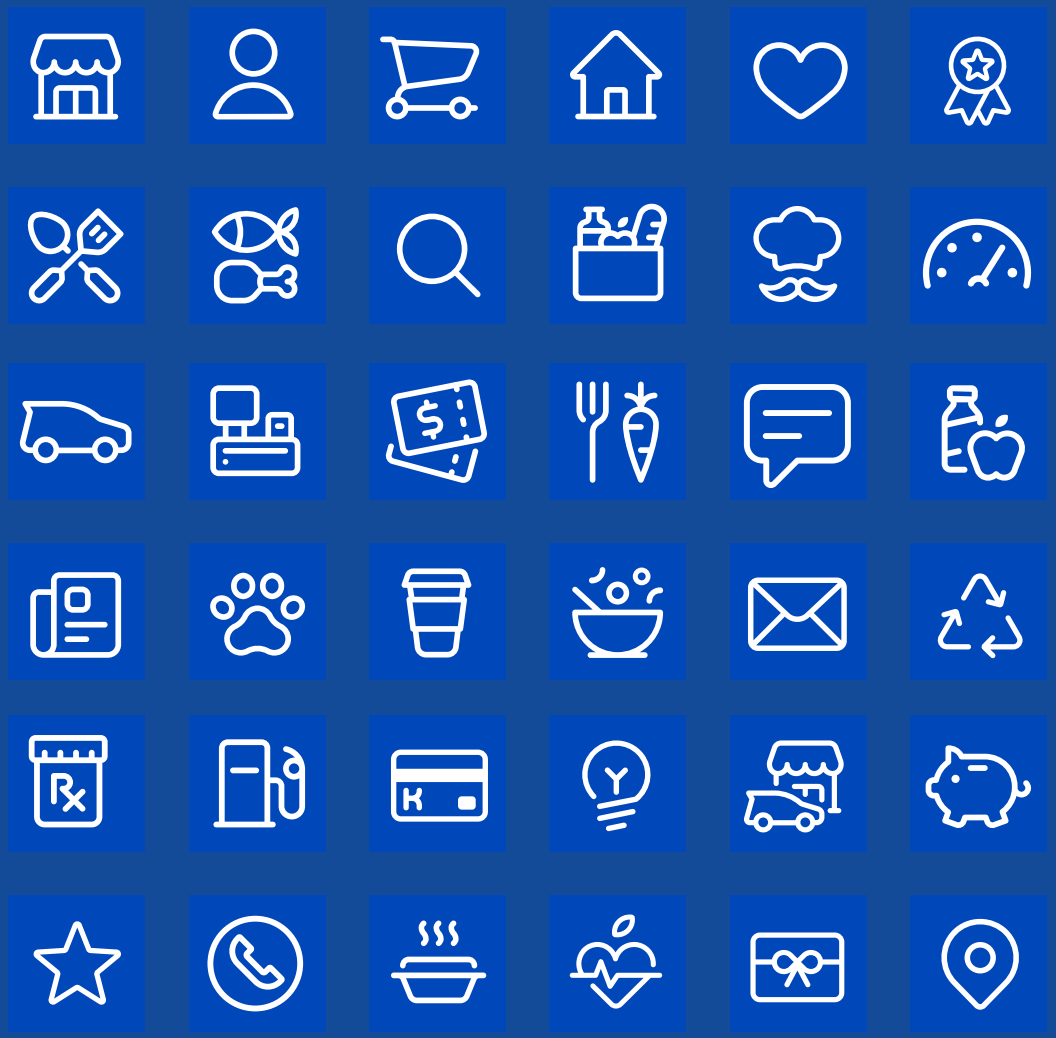

Icon sizing should be consistent. Refrain from scaling icons to different sizes within the same space. There are 4 sizes available:

Proportion

Our icons should always keep the same volumetric weight to ensure they are visually consistent and balanced when placed together. To create a new icon, follow the grid shown below.

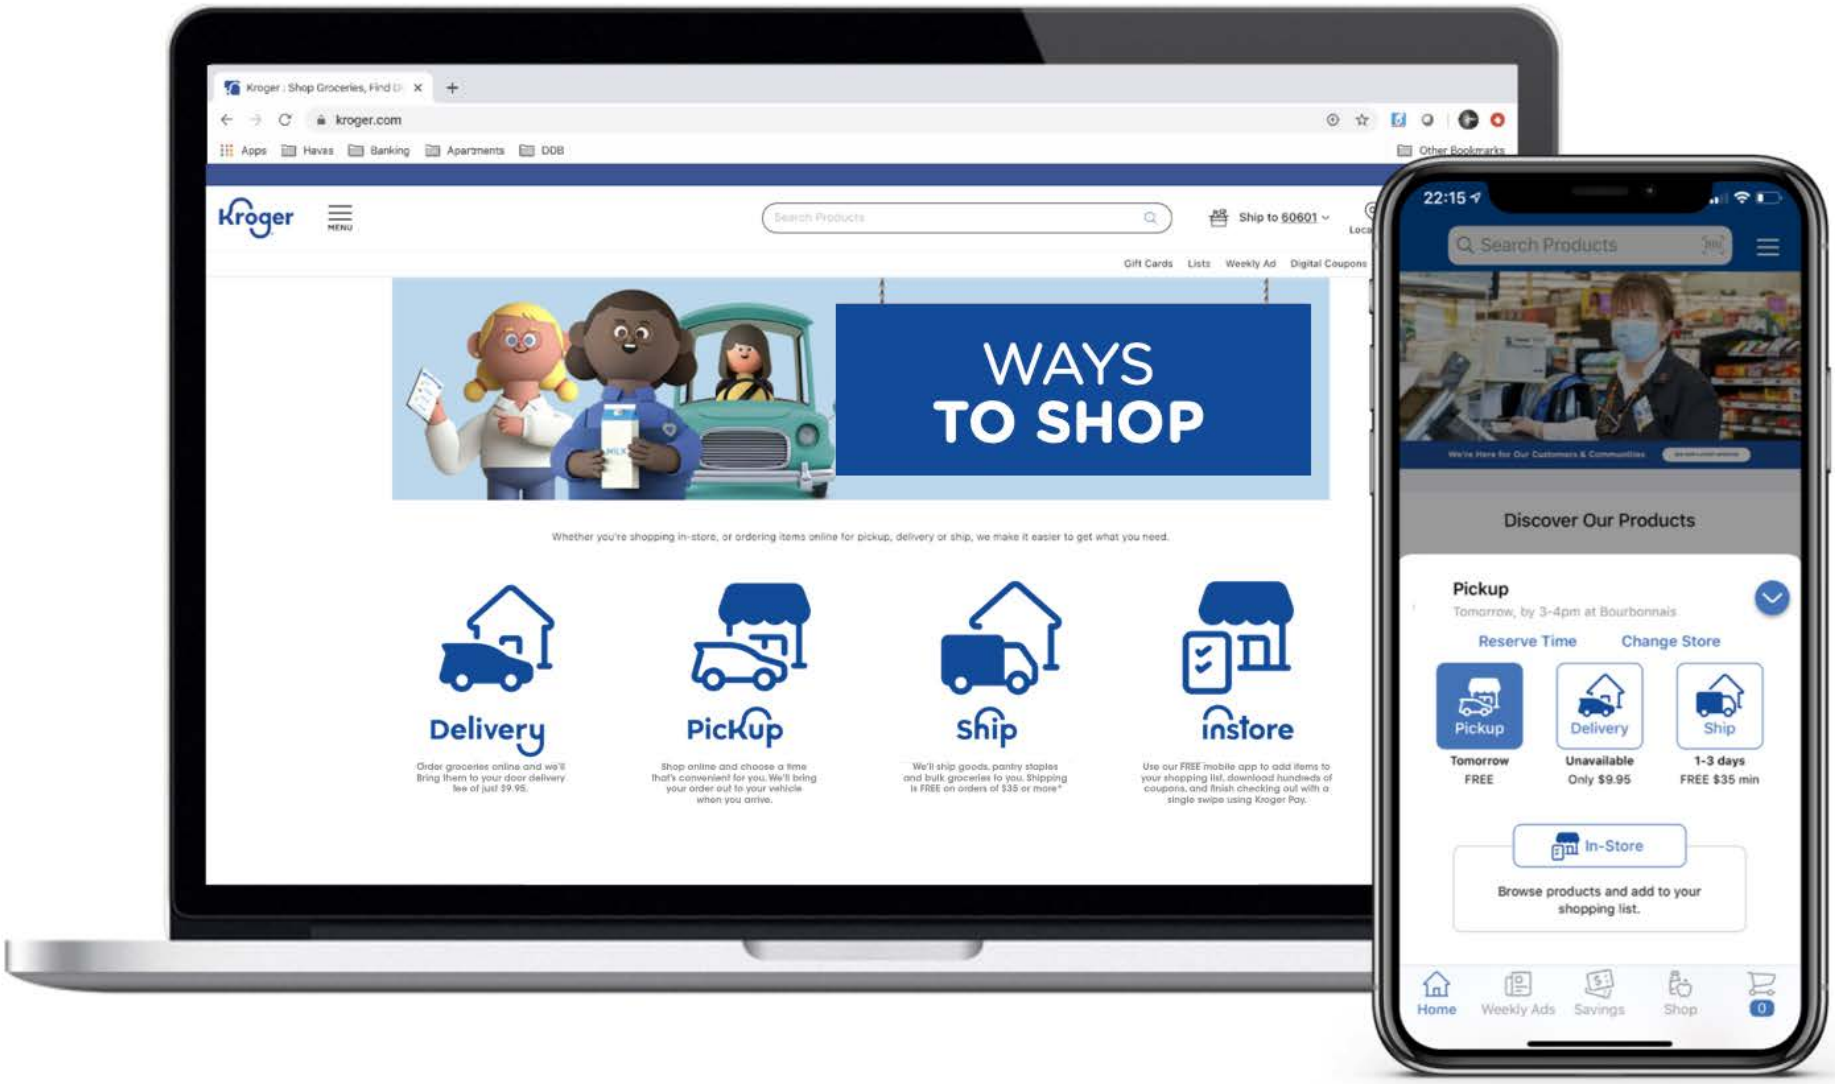

The full icon library is available via the Kroger Brand Team.

MODALITY ICONS

Icons should be placed above or adjacent to the copy they highlight. If using several icons on the same layout, always keep equidistant spacing between them.

Do not pair icons with long headlines. They should have a supporting role in our messaging and should not be used as hero imagery.

Do not use the icons with the Krofont logo in small spaces like the app, which can be difficult to read.

KROJIS

OVERVIEW

Krojis are inspired by our real customers, not the brand, banners or departments within our stores. They mirror shoppers' personalities, tastes, preferences and problems, making them highly relatable and fun.

The following is a list of the attributes of our illustration style. Use this list as a reference when using characters and environments.

GRAPHIC

OPTIMISTIC

NATURAL LIGHT

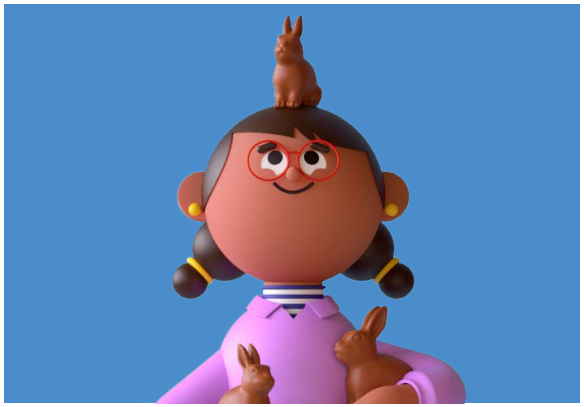

DYNAMIC

PETS & ANIMALS

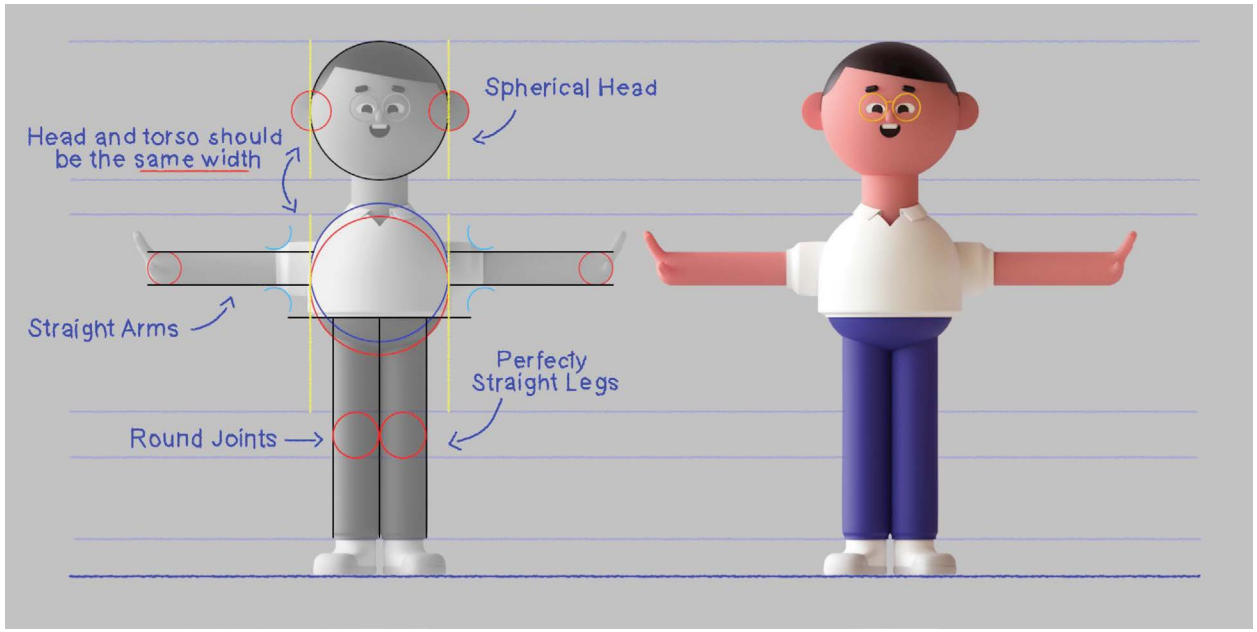

Krojis are also animal lovers and can have their own Kroji pets. Pets (such as dogs and cats) and large animals (such as cows) are also treated as Kroji characters. Their mannerisms should be playful and mimic their animal counterparts in real life.

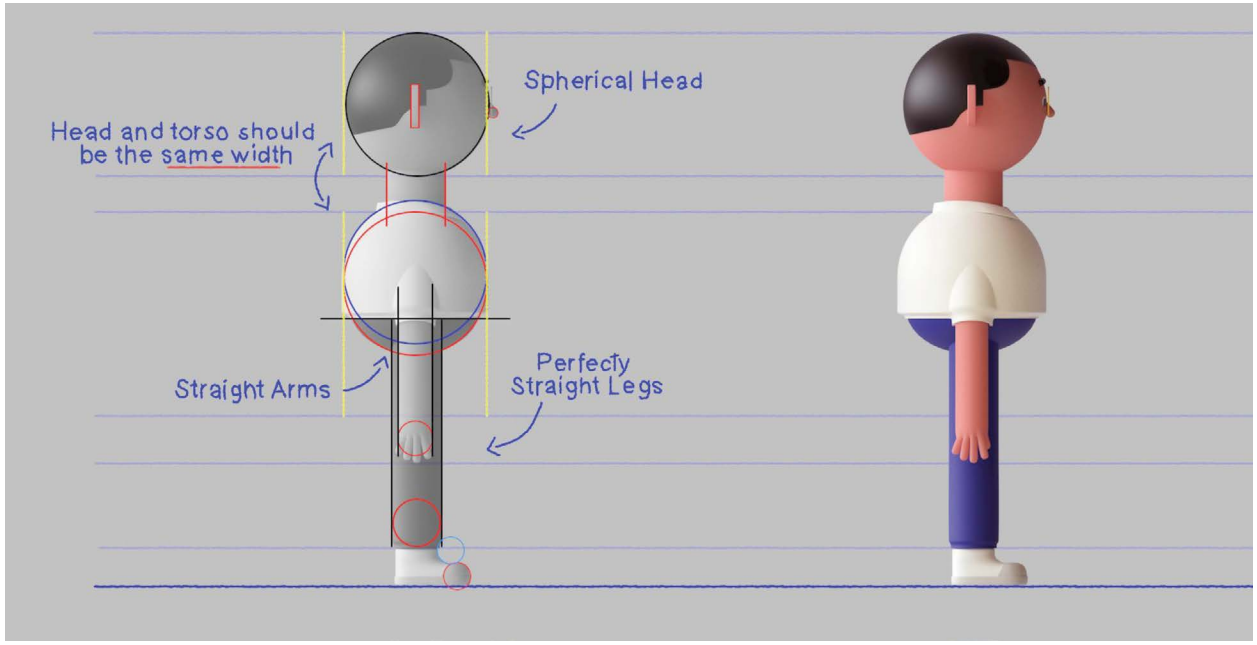

PROPORTIONS

The scale and proportion of Krojis should mimic reality to the extent possible; for example, giants don't exist and kids are smaller than adults.

This applies only to the Kroji world, such as on a print layout of real food, so copy can be depicted in a larger size than the Krojis.

ANATOMY

Krojis are designed based on the circle. And even though their proportions do not match a human's, their relative proportion to their surroundings should mimic reality to the extent possible; for example, giants don't exist, and kids are smaller than adults. But this rule applies only to the Kroji world, such as on a print layout of real food, so copy can be depicted in a larger size than the Krojis.

ACCESSORIES & ACCENTS

There are four main categories of Kroji accessories, offering a wide range of possibilities to give our Krojis some personality: fashion, store, food and everyday objects. Krojis can hold, wear or simply stand by the accessories. Avoid accessories that could be considered harmful, disrespectful, violent or dangerous. Kroji accessories should never be used without a Kroji.

Accents

The purpose of the accents is to create another implied layer of motion in the animated world of Kroger. Accents should not be overused and are not mandatory across all marketing assets.

We use approximately 2–3 accents in a single asset to fill gaps and help achieve a more balanced layout. You can also incorporate accents when there is no room for a larger Kroji.

Bee

Snowflake

Flower

Tree

Fashion

Krojis, like our customers, have their own style; they might need some fashion accessories such as hats or scarves.

Store

Krojis shop at Kroger and work there, too. In their daily interactions with us, they use brown bags, carts, aprons, etc.

Food

Krojis love all kinds of food like fruit, meat and vegetables. Krojis can hold only their 3D food, but can appear next to an actual photo of food, showing excitement for the product.

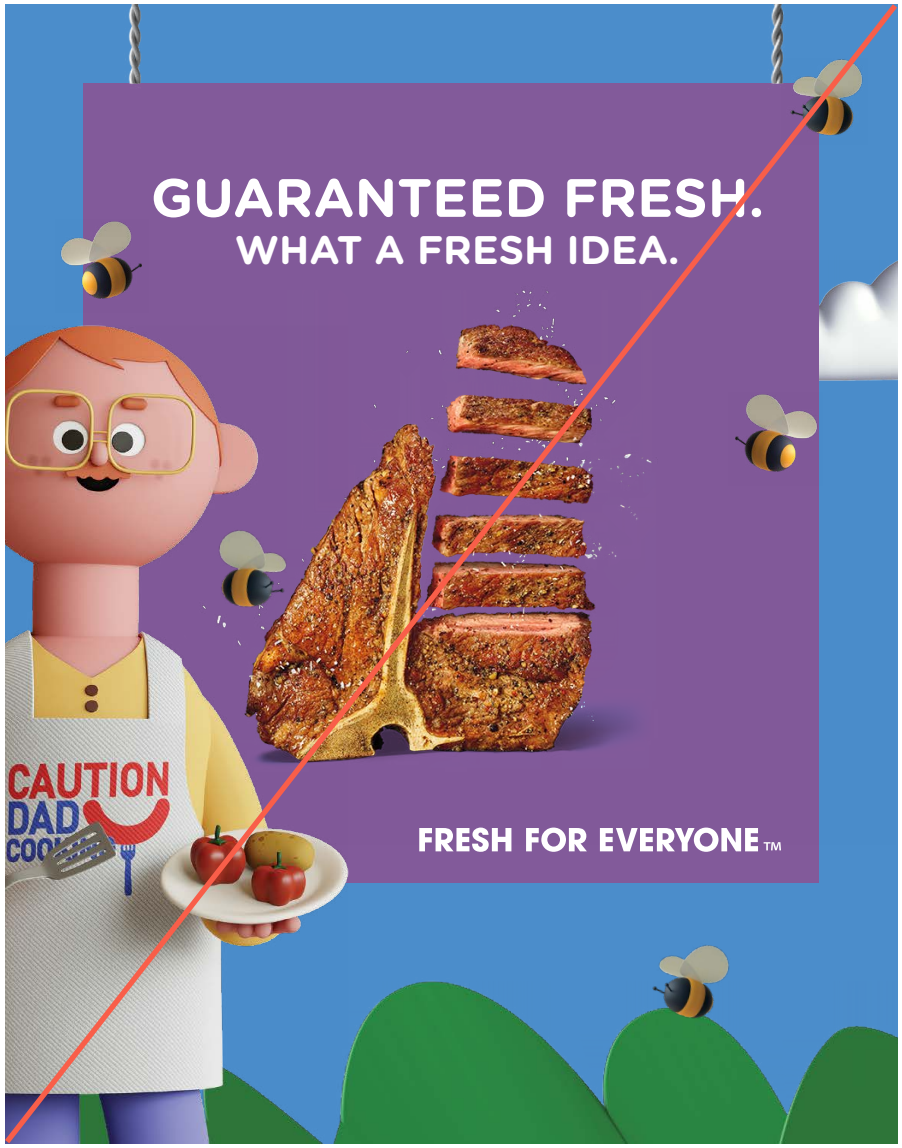

Everyday Objects

Krojis also have a variety of everyday needs, and we have them all covered. Whatever they need, Kroger can provide, including diapers, costumes, tree lights, furniture, etc.

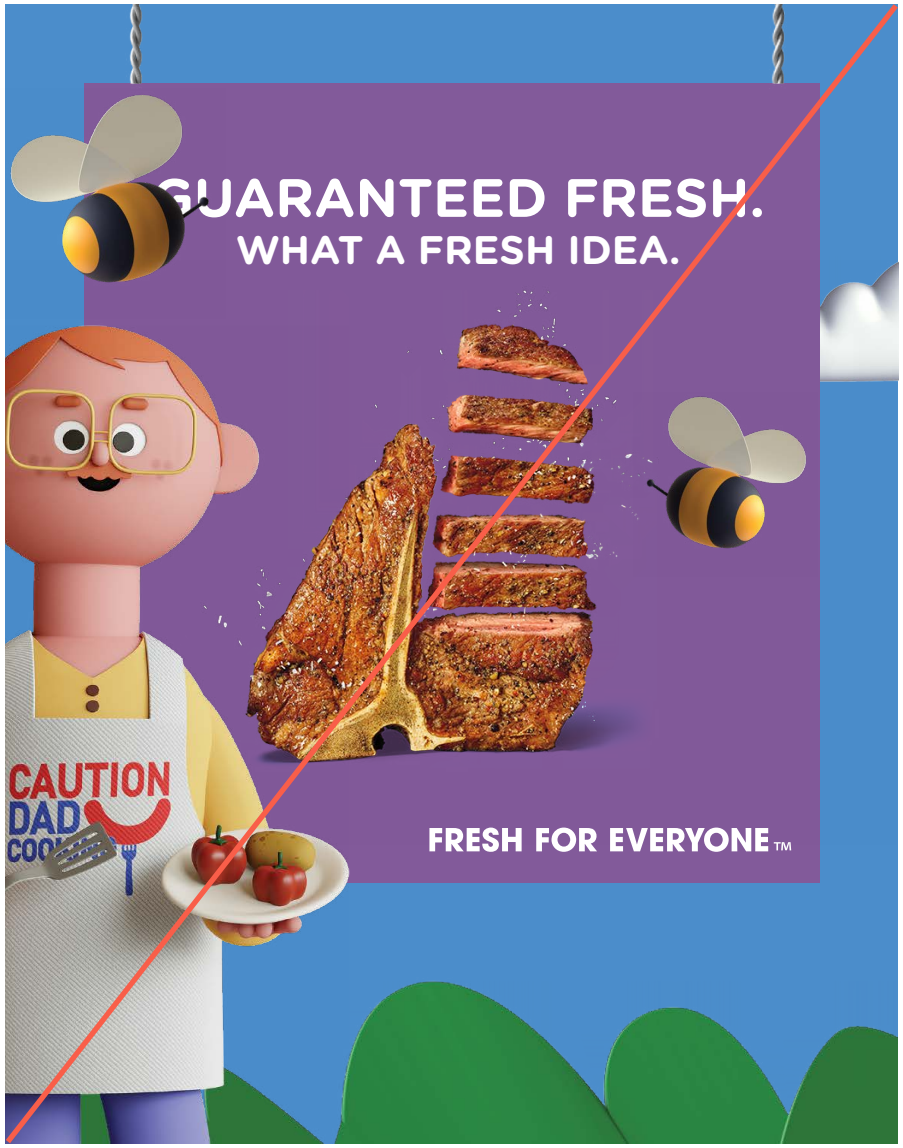

ACCENT USAGE DONT'S

Do not use too many accents in a single asset or overlay them on a Kroji.

Do not overly enlarge accents in an asset or overlay them on type.

VIDEO ENVIRONMENT

Our characters and products are the heroes of the scene, so the scenarios have to remain clean and simple, avoiding unnecessary ornamentation. The scenarios should always feel relatable, approachable and accessible to our customers. Avoid environments that look too upscale, overly elevated, dangerous, fantastic or unrealistic, such as outer space.

BEHAVIOR

Being inspired by our customers, Krojis also mimic their behavior. Krojis have feelings and express their emotions through their movements and gestures, not with words. Here are detailed guidelines for Kroji behavior.

Dos

- Krojis mimic human behavior.
- Animals mimic their species' behavior.
- Kroji movements and gestures mimic our customers.
- Krojis can depict different kinds of personalities, such as friendly, shy or sensitive.
- Krojis always behave according to their age, e.g., a child cannot drive.
- Krojis only consume alcohol responsibly, such as at social events.
- Krojis can react to narrators' comments through movements and gestures.

Don'ts

- Krojis can't go beyond the limits of human capabilities, such as flying.
- Krojis don't show violent, reckless, negligent, illegal or criminal behavior.
- Krojis don't get intoxicated or engage in dangerous behavior.
- Krojis don't speak with each other or with our customers, be it written or spoken.
- Krojis don't move or make gestures that could be considered inappropriate.

USAGE

How should Krojis be used?

When deciding if a Kroji should be used to help support a creative asset, consider what role the Kroji would have. In most assets, the use of Krojis should be purposeful to support the creative and communicate the idea of "For Everyone" in some way. For example, a promo sale on steaks might have a Kroji grilling to support that message.

How should I crop a Kroji?

The ideal crop is right above the ankles but below the knees. Krojis can be cropped on the right or left. They should always be anchored at the bottom.

What is the hierarchy?

Krojis are never the first priority over main headlines or promotions. Instead, Krojis should be used only to help communicate the message or support the creative.

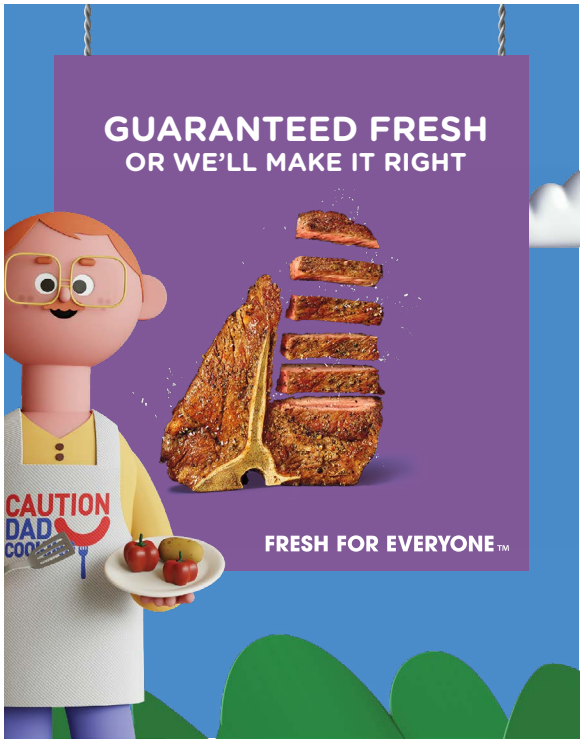

When should I use Krojis?

Krojis should support the overall creative whenever possible. They should be used to bring fun and humanity to an asset, a way to make the asset more relatable to the consumer. Most importantly, Krojis should add value to the creative, not noise.

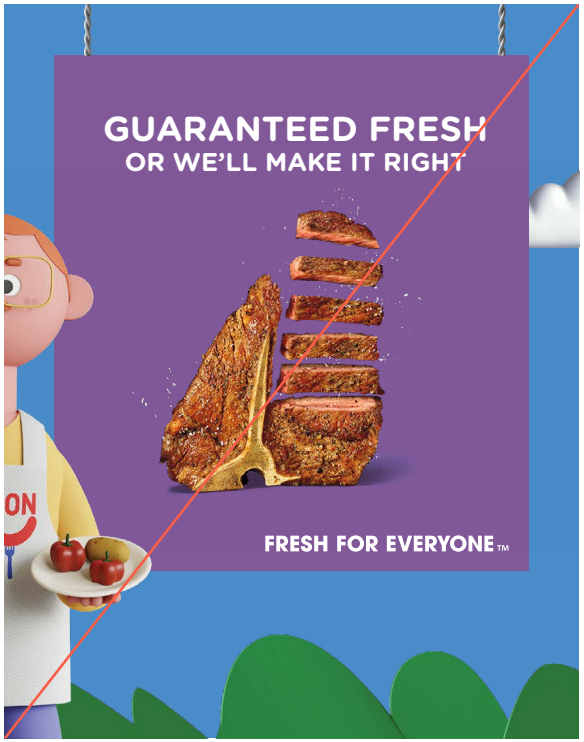

When should Krojis not be used?

Krojis should not be used if they are not supporting the creative idea or execution.

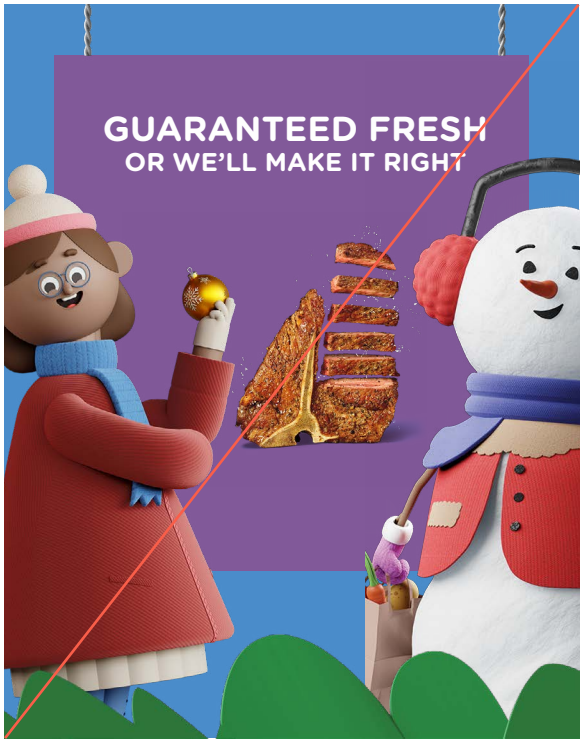

Good Example

Bad Example: Do not crop the Kroji out of the layout.

Bad Example: Do not use winter Krojis in a summer setting.

Continued...

Where are Krojis featured?

Krojis can be used in combination with the flying food photography or with products in More Ways to Save assets, but should never appear in the real world with real people or in a real environment.

How do I create new assets?

Put in a request to the Brand Team. Once created, these new assets must be shared with the Brand Team for review/approval.

Which Krojis should I use?

Try to keep diversity in mind during creation of a communication. There are a handful of different Krojis available, so use a wide variety whenever possible.

Avoid stereotypes. Krojis are not in fixed positions and can be placed in various poses. Only Brand Team-approved Krojis can be used in consumer materials. All requests for Krojis must go through the Brand Team.

How many Krojis should I use?

We suggest at most 2-3 Krojis. That being said, the space in the assets should not feel crowded once the Krojis are included.

Do creative assets always need Krojis?

If adding a Kroji feels forced in a particular asset because of available space, context or other mandatory items, it is not mandatory to include a Kroji. Krojis should support the creative whenever possible.

Good Example

Good Example

Bad Example: Do not place Krojis into a real-world scene.

Bad Example: Do not assemble Krojis from a similar ethnic background.

PHOTOGRAPHY

OVERVIEW

When searching for or photographing food imagery, it is important to address the following guidelines: staging, color palette, lighting and treatment of food. This will help us capture the Kroger look and feel.

Our photographic style attributes are listed below. Use this list as a reference when you search for stock photos or to brief a photographer:

- GRAPHIC
- FRESH
- DELICIOUS
- BRIGHT
- OPTIMISTIC
- DYNAMIC
- ASPIRATIONAL
- ACCESSIBLE
- MULTICULTURAL

Overall Look

Our studio photography uses either "floating" or playfully stacked compositions on one of our tertiary-colored backgrounds with a bright and high-contrast look. The in situ style utilizes graphic compositions on simple white or light backgrounds with bright but natural lighting.

Lighting

The lighting on our studio photography isbright, creating a high-contrast environment. Nevertheless, our in situ photography light is bright but natural and balanced with the perfect level of color contrast, allowing our products to stand out from the background. Avoid hard shadows on both styles.

Food and Environment

Our food looks casual, "perfectly imperfect," always being the hero in our photography. The products appear on simple and "clean" backdrops. Avoid overcrowded or ornate environments, instead opting for graphic compositions that enhance our products.

FLYING FOOD
PRIMARY STYLE (MARKETING)

Main characteristics

Food is arranged creating graphic and architectonic compositions in which different items appear on top of each other or floating close to each other, making the scene dynamic and giving it a sense of motion.

The use of highly recognizable food, such as tomatoes, peppers and hamburgers, is preferred for this style.

Food photography can be placed on either a high-contrast color background or a tone-on-tone color, as seen in this photography section. The color should be pulled from the tertiary color palette.

Use

Use this style exclusively for brand-building purposes for "Fresh for Everyone", and preferably to express concepts or ideas in combination with Krojis.

How to get these photographs

The primary option is a photoshoot. The secondary option is looking for stock photography and replicating this style to the greatest possible extent. Items should cast soft shadows and be shot from a frontal angle with single directional lighting.

Type of items

Use this style for fresh food.

STATIC FOOD
PRIMARY STYLE (MARKETING)

Main characteristics

The food is displayed in stacked compositions and with a graphic intention. The product could appear alone or on a dish, a board or any other kind of platform.

When showcasing a collection of different products, such as household or beauty, these should be placed and organized with a graphic intention.

The use of highly recognizable food, such as tomatoes or hamburgers, is preferred for this style.

Food photography can be placed on either a high-contrast color background or a tone-on-tone color, as seen in this photography section. The color should be pulled from the tertiary color palette.

Use

Use this style to showcase items sold in our stores, including only food or ingredients you can actually buy, and avoid the use of Krojis in combination with this style. Do not use this style to communicate concepts or ideas, but to showcase products in an authentic and truthful way.

How to get these photographs

The primary option is a photoshoot. The secondary option is looking for stock photography and replicating this style to the greatest possible extent. Items should cast soft shadows and be shot from a frontal angle with single directional lighting.

Type of items

Use this style for fresh food.

MACRO FOOD
SECONDARY STYLE (FUNCTIONAL)

Main characteristics

Close-up shots of fresh food.

Use

Use this style for promotional and editorial purposes and only when you need to place type on top of a photographic background, ensuring proper legibility.

This style is more appropriate to use for food than non-food items. However, if used for non-food items, like consumer packaged goods, the close-up should capture the texture or content of the item itself (not the packaging). Some examples include photographing the texture of apparel, cotton balls or pads, paper towels, etc.

How to get these photographs

Photoshoot or stock photography. Food should be displayed in static, simple compositions and shot at macro angles, casting soft shadows with strong highlights. The food should be set in natural colors and in full-frame compositions.

Type of items

Use this style for fresh food and consumer packaged goods, general merchandise, pharmaceuticals, clothing, etc.

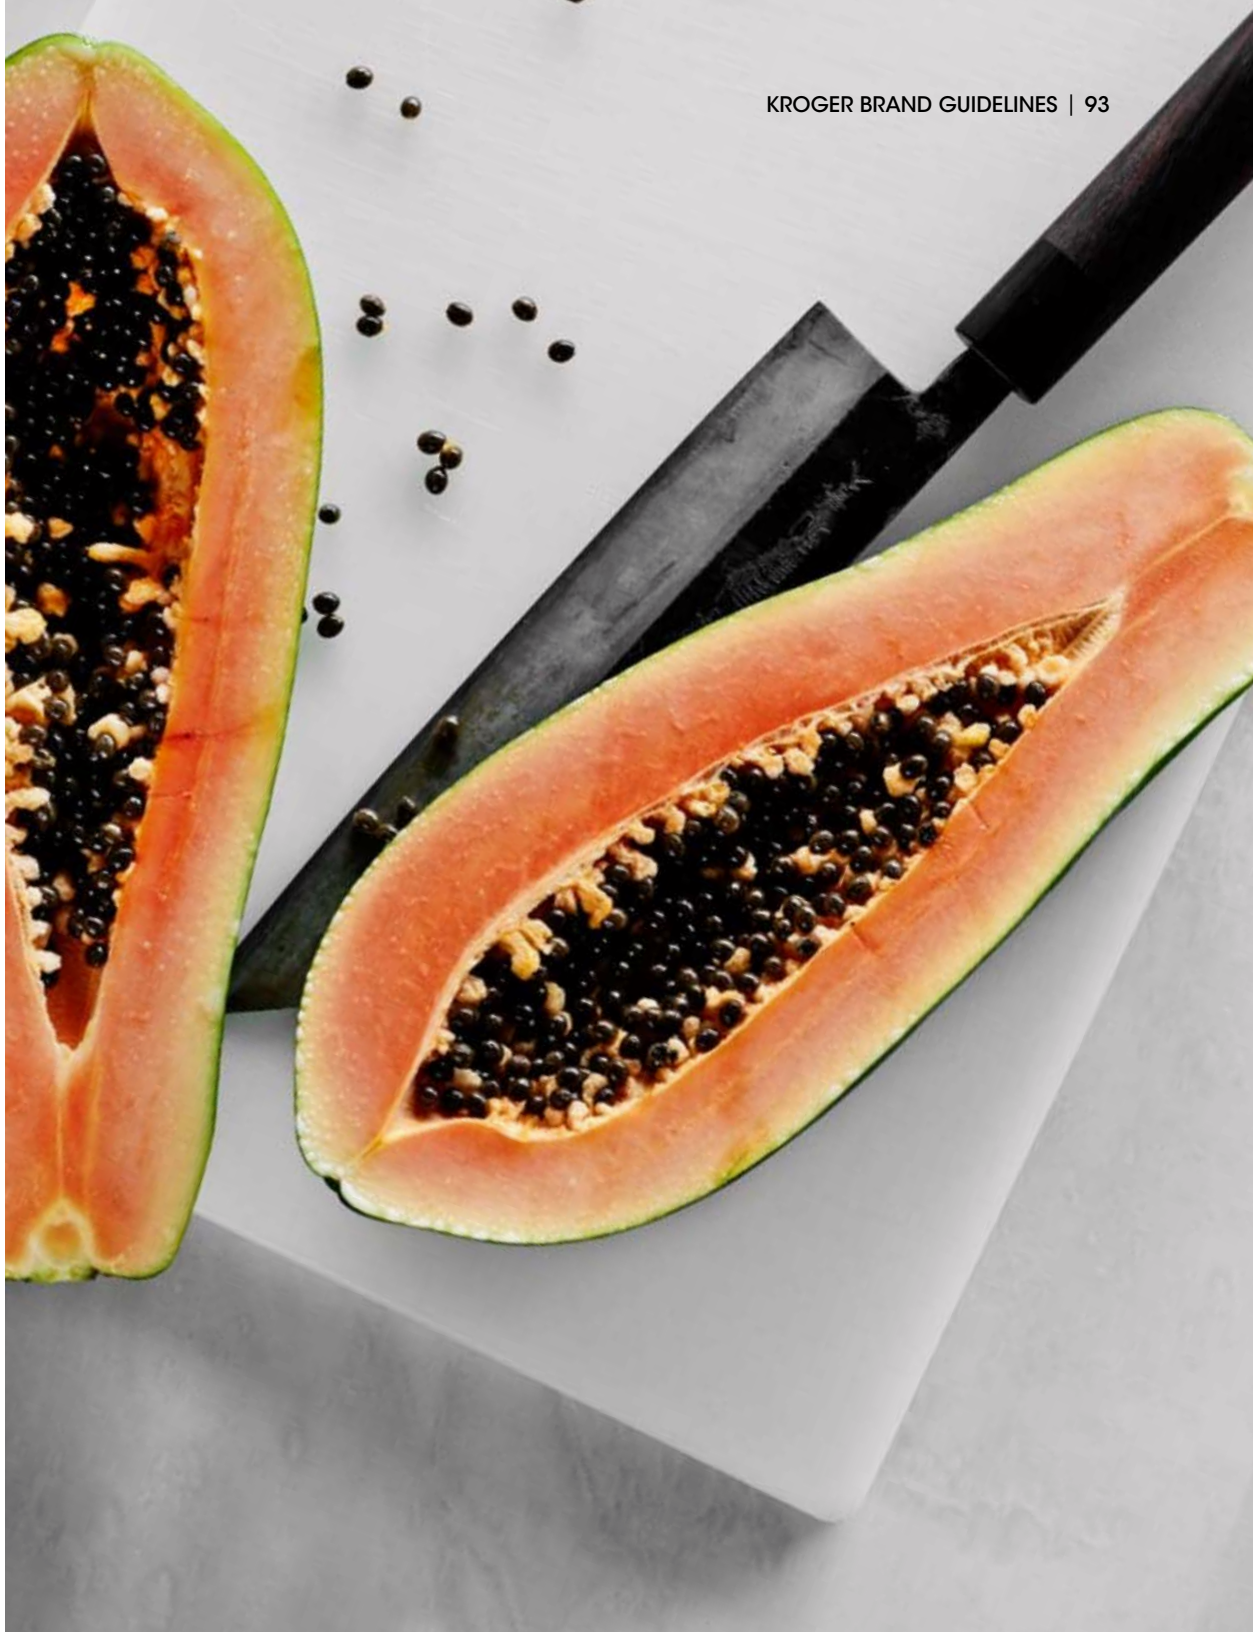

IN SITU FOOD
SECONDARY STYLE (FUNCTIONAL)

Main characteristics

Food is displayed in a graphic style, with compositions having a visual value based on how the product is placed and showcased.

The backgrounds should be bright and luminous but balanced, without being fully white. Background details should recede, allowing our food to stand out.

Our props should be simple but have an aesthetic value. Their color should be neutral, allowing our food to stand out. All must come from Kroger or be "family heirloom style" items not highly recognizable as being from a particular brand. Don't use props purchased at competing retailers. Real food being featured for sale must come from Kroger.

Use

Use this style mainly for informational and editorial purposes, such as recipe photos or table-setting photos, in magazines, on menu items or websites.

The use of this style in a real environment is preferred for plated recipes and plated meal suggestions (mainly editorial). Within this style, food compositions can include outlined packages, if needed.

The use of this style in a studio environment is recommended for online e-commerce items with white backgrounds, without shadow and pictured primarily straight on.

How to get these photographs/footage

Use film, a photoshoot or stock photography. Food should be shot from the top down or at frontal angles. Use your best judgment to select which works better to show the food or dish in the most appetizing and beautiful ways.

Type of items

Use this style for fresh food, consumer packaged goods, general merchandise, pharmaceuticals, clothing, etc.

PRODUCT MONTAGE

When using a variety of products in a lineup, try to carefully stagger their placement with some products in the front and some in the back. Use a grounding shadow below the products and behind them so that they feel real and give the illusion they are sitting on a surface.

Keep the following in mind when dealing with product montages:

- All products should be shot at eye level so that the angle is consistent throughout.
- Background colors should be pulled only from Kroger's color palette.
- Within product montage shots, ensure that each brand name is always visible in some capacity.

FLYING PRODUCTS

In instances where we have the ability to shoot packaged goods, and where there is a limited number of related items to feature, you may use this optional version of our flying-food style outlined below.

This style can be used only with a small grouping of products, approximately fewer than 5 items.

All items in the group must be related (for example, a gift basket or a selection of various chip brands). This style should never be used with unrelated packaged goods.

TONE OF VOICE

OVERALL

As a brand whose goal is to make freshness accessible to all, our voice should always speak through an approachable and optimistic tone.

We are the opposite of the highfalutin foodie brand. Instead, our brand is a relatable and witty friend who understands our lives and our personality quirks and offers us solutions we'll actually like and need.

Our tone also reflects our brand mission to feed the human spirit by always providing quality, convenience and value with our products every day.

Food Is

At Kroger, we're all about fresh food. But fresh food doesn't always mean microgreens grown atop a hydroponic herb garden; fresh food shouldn't be that exclusive or snobby. Fresh food is all about quality products that we can enjoy every day, from microgreens to mac and cheese.

That is why at Kroger, we treat and talk about food in a way that's refreshing and accessible. The way real people talk about food. It's about your kid's favorite pasghetti dish. And about the fact that you love cookies so much, you may as well be a cookietarian.

Food has always been an expression of ourselves, which yes, means you literally are what you eat. That is why when Kroger talks about food, it should always sound friendly, approachable and above all, human.

DOS & DON'TS

Our voice is:	Dos
Approachable	• Find solutions to real-life human problems.
Optimistic	• Relate to your audience through the food we all love.
Witty	• Invite people to the family table.
Friendly	• Have fun with food and celebrate it.
Relatable	• Make food solutions insightful.
Human	• Aim for brevity.
Fun	• Above all, sound refreshingly accessible.
Helpful
Inclusive
Confident

Our voice is not:	Don'ts
Preachy	• Wax on about pompous foodie techniques.
Cold	• Shame people for the food they love or how they eat.
Slapstick	• Ask for exclusive reservations or members-only cards.
Salesy	• Treat food only as fuel.
Pretentious	• Force insights to fit food options.
Snobby	• No matter what, sound snobby or pompous.
Exclusive	• Overuse exclamation points.
Vanilla
Fake

STYLE

Copy should be casual, conversational, confident and upbeat, engaging customers by connecting our food expertise to their desire for food inspiration.

EXAMPLES:

“Fresh is for people who eat. Yes, that includes you.”

“Dinner for 10? You got this.”

“Let the holiday freshtivities begin.”

“For brown baggers, bakers and throw-it-in-the-microwavers.”

“Your meals delivered by our wheels.”

“For those who say ta-may-to, and those who say ta-mah-to.”

“A Thanksgiving feast that won’t gobble your paycheck.”

“Save like you’re in-store, from the great outdoors.”

“Grocery delivery with a tap, in our app.”

“Personalized coupons and weekly deals? We call that winning.”

COPY BEST PRACTICES

CAPITALIZATION

Headlines

For the purposes of this document, headlines are defined as the single most important message appearing on a screen, sign, page or spread.

- If a headline is 7 words or less, it should be styled in all caps.
- Example: LOWER THAN LOW PRICES
- If a headline is 8 words or more, it should be styled in sentence case with end punctuation to improve legibility (even when paired with a Kroji).
- Example: We've got lower than low prices on your fresh faves.

Exception:

- HTML headlines on banner.com should be styled in title case with no end punctuation.
- Example: Get Ready for Your Most Spook-tacular Halloween Yet

One-off Uppercase Words

- Avoid the use of all uppercase letters, except to highlight the following words: FREE, OFF, SAVE and promo codes like SAVE20NOW.

Calls to Action (CTAs)

- Should always be styled in title case with no end punctuation.
- Example: Shop Now

Note: Subheads, lead-ins, sign-offs, recipe names and other secondary callouts should not be styled in all caps. Use sentence case for complete sentences. If it's not a complete sentence, use title case.

PUNCTUATION

Exclamation Points

- Based on research findings, exclamation points should only be used in push notifications to drive immediate engagement.
- Do not use anywhere else (to avoid being too salesy).

Exception:

- In targeted, one-to-one Best Customer Communications, exclamation points may be used sparingly (i.e. no more than 1 per communication, spread or story) if appropriate for the message (e.g. Thank you for shopping with us!).

Headline End Punctuation

- Only use end punctuation in sentence case headlines.

Exception:

- If punctuation is used in the middle of an all caps headline, end punctuation should be used.
- Example: FRESH EVERY DAY, SO SHOP ANY WAY.

Oxford Commas

- We do not use oxford commas.

HIGHLIGHTED & BOLDED WORDS

In Headlines

- Copy should only be highlighted or bolded at the beginning or the end of a headline, never in the middle, and should be used to emphasize benefits rather than features.
- Use white for the highlight color, and yellow for the rest of the copy (see example below).

URL FORMATTING

- Use initial caps for Banner name and main words in domain names only.
- Lower case all words in redirects.
- Examples: KingSoopers.com, SmithsFoodandDrug.com
- Examples: KingSoopers.com/myprescriptions, SmithsFoodandDrug.com/4xfuelpoints

LAYOUTS

KROJIS OOH

The following are examples of an OOH (Out-of-Home) Kroji layout.

The background should always be set in sky blue, with one exception. Stone blue may be used as needed for contrast or ADA compliance.

The logo should always be knockout-white on sky blue or Kroger core blue on stone blue to ensure legibility.

The headline should be set in Gotham Rounded all caps unless it exceeds 7 words, and only then should it be set in sentence case.

We've created a background library with a wide range of elements that have been approved and are available to be used.

When using grass, place it either overlapping or below the banner.

It is not necessary to use the hanging signs or a landscape grounding for all assets. If you have a landscape, the background should make sense in context with the messaging.

KROJIS POS

Krojis and flying food would never exist together since Krojis don't exist in the real world. Flying food would always be in a hanging sign. These are formats you can use when flying food is not needed for POS. The background should be set in one of the secondary blue colors.

The benefit (copy) should always be the most important.

The hierarchy should be:

- Benefit (copy)
- Kroji

Never use the banner logo on in-store POS signage. Only use the FFE tagline. Use the stacked version for larger layouts and the horizontal version for smaller layouts.

HANGING SIGNS OOH

The following are examples of OOH hanging-sign layouts.

The background color should be set in one of the secondary blue colors, and a tertiary color should be used for the hanging sign.

The headline should be set in Gotham Rounded all caps unless it exceeds 7 words, and only then should it be set in sentence case.

Ensure the main focus is always the food.

The hierarchy should be:

- Benefit (copy)
- Food photography
- Krojis

The logo should always be knockout-white on sky blue or Kroger core blue on stone blue to ensure legibility.

HANGING SIGNS POS

The following are examples of hanging sign POS layouts.

The background color should be set in one of the secondary blue colors, and a tertiary color should be used for the hanging sign.

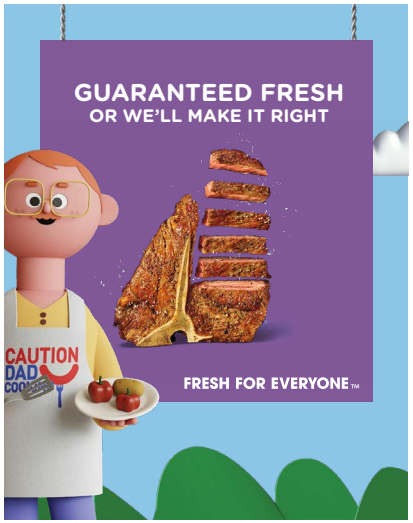

The headline should be set in Gotham Rounded all caps unless it exceeds 7 words, and only then should it be set in sentence case.

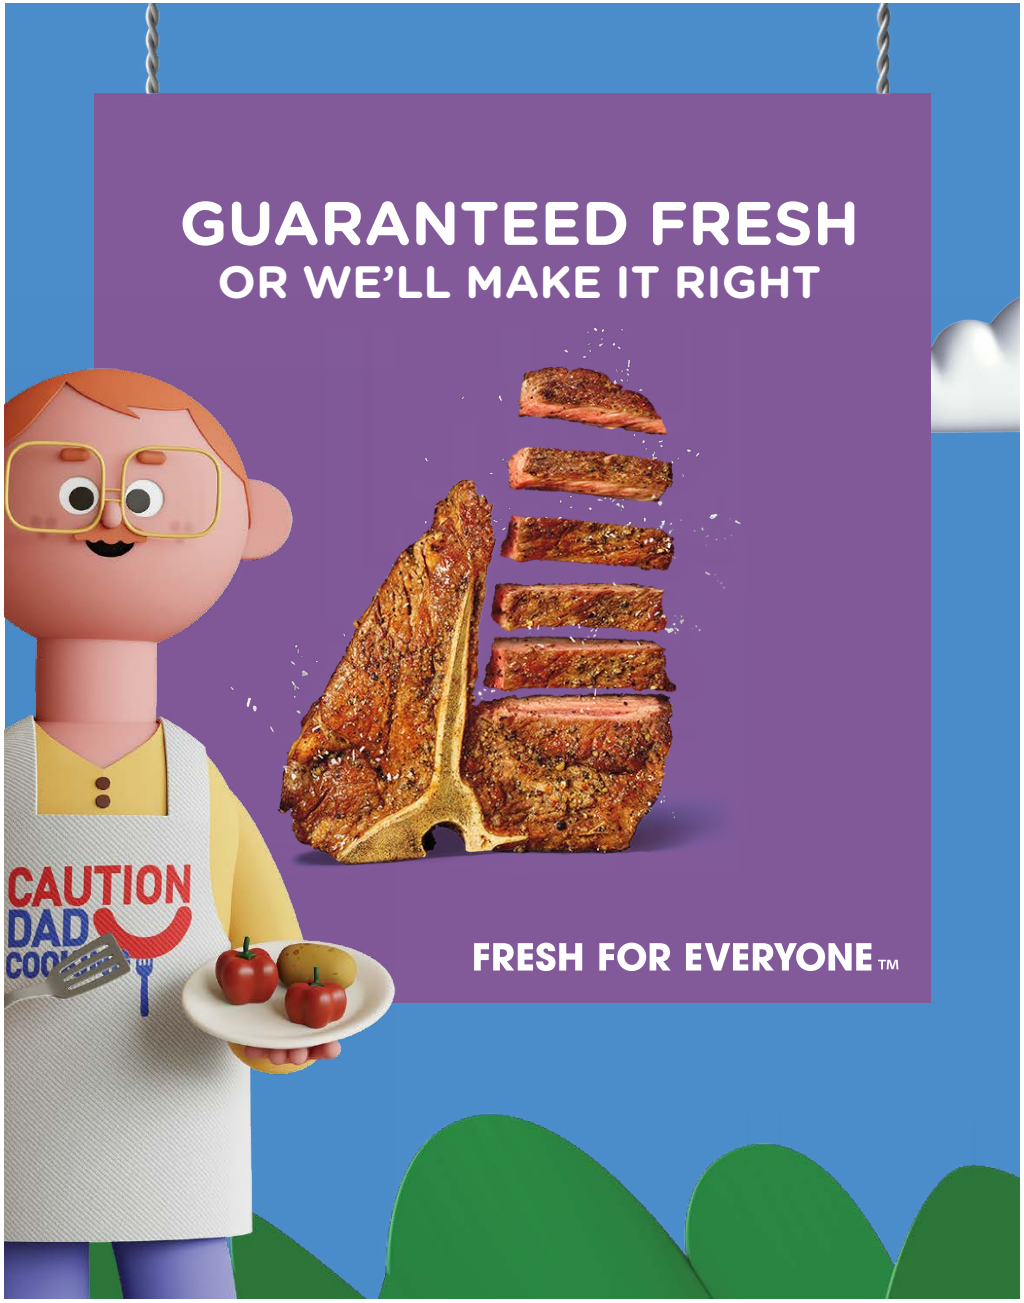

Ensure the main focus is always the food.

The hierarchy should be:

- Benefit (copy)
- Food photography
- Krojis

Never use the banner logo on in-store POS signage. Only use the FFE tagline. For larger layouts, use the stacked version, and for smaller layouts, use the horizontal version.

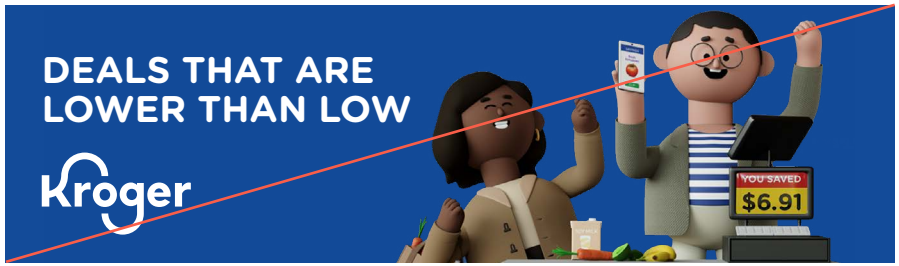

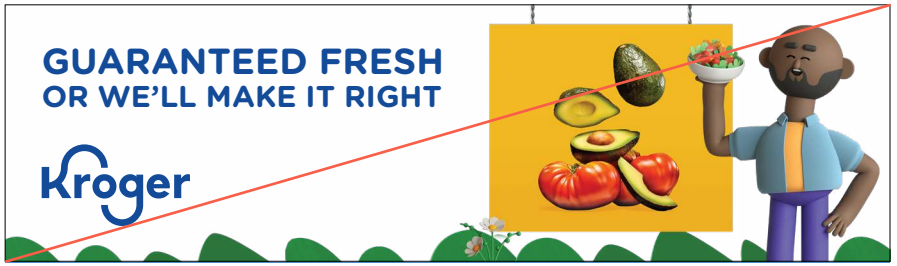

INCORRECT USAGE

The following are examples of incorrect OOH layouts.

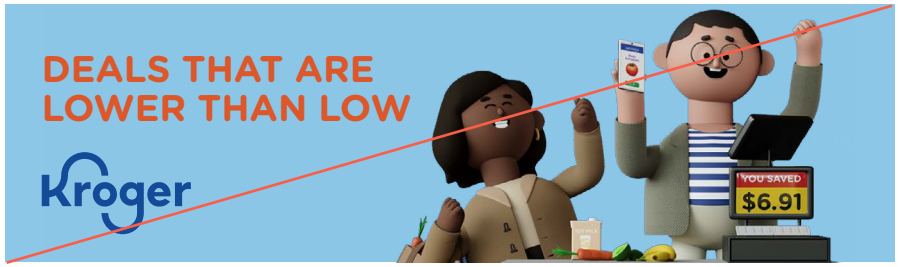

Breaking Kroger's brand style guide weakens the Kroger overall brand and compromises legibility.

Do not use Kroger primary blue as a background color.

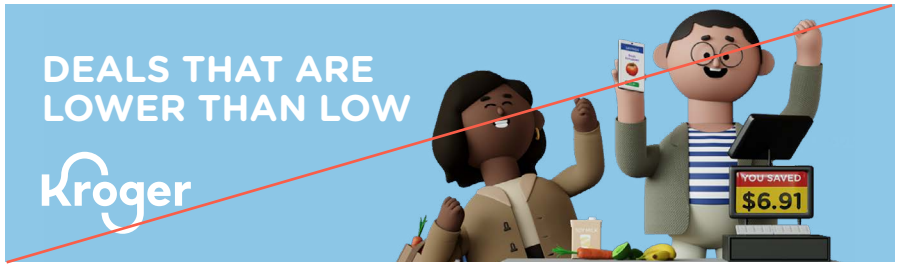

Do not use white as a background unless specifically requested.

Do not use tertiary colors for copy with the exception of yellow.

Do not crop the hanging sign off of layouts.

Do not use white copy or a white logo on Kroger stone blue due to poor legibility.

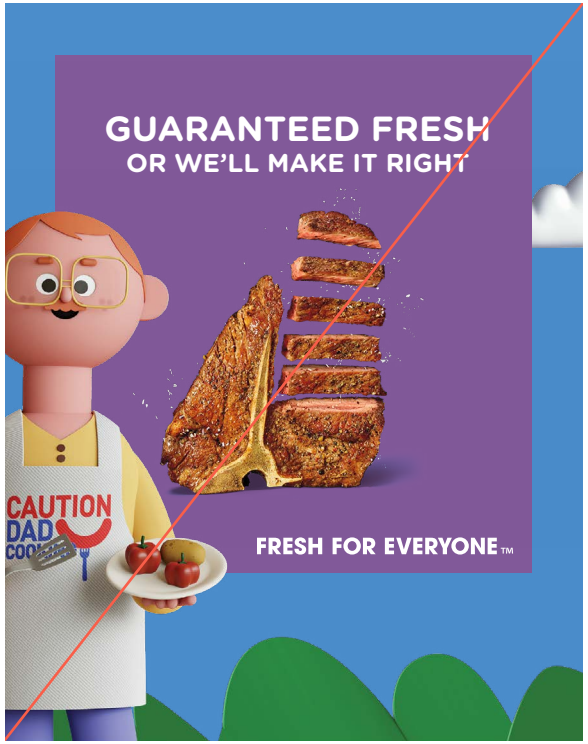

Do not use any tertiary colors as background colors and only use Kroger blues.
